

Linguistics is the study of language, which is also concerned with identifying the meaningful element of specific language. Linguistics has many branches; they are phonology, morphology, syntax, semantics, pragmatics, etc.